

BURNS FATAL TO HEROIC HUSBAND

Speaker To Tell Of Conditions In Russia

On Thursday evening, February 22 at 8 o'clock in the Mokena school auditorium the people will be privileged to hear a lecture on present conditions in Europe by a man who is well qualified to speak on such a topic. Werner V. Kuhlberg, a foreign tongue Missionary and pastor, lecturer, scholar, linguist, concert pianist and organist, was born in Estonia (at that time an integral part of imperial Russia), and has spent 16 years in various parts of Russia alone, including also the years of the revolutions. His father was a clergyman there, the pastor of a congregation of over 20,000 souls. This fact alone vouches for interesting data in the presentations of the scheduled topic, for congregations of this size are unknown in our country.

The speaker is furthermore a globe trotter. Following the Communist revolution, he left Russia to continue in his studies. He studied Mathematics at the University of Dorpat, Estonia, and civil engineering at the University of Berlin-Charlottenburg. He is also a graduate of the Conservatory of Music in Moscow, Russia, where he received his degree at the age of 16. He holds a number of other academic degrees. For two years he fought in the "War of Freedom" waged by the recently established Baltic democracies against their common invader—communist Russia. He was a commissioned officer in the army of Estonia, commanded an armored train during that war, and has been wounded in that encounter.

In the United States alone, v. Kuhlberg has travelled over 250,000 miles, and the rest of the world also has not been neglected by this noted lecturer. Recently he completed a lengthy tour in the interest of gathering more recent information about topics of world importance. During these travels he has acquired the speaking knowledge of 12 languages and is acquainted with many more of them. Quite naturally his lectures have proved to be entertaining as well as educational and timely. The man does not lack the natural, refreshing humor.

Many of the statements during the course of his lecture may strike the listeners at least as grossly exaggerated. They are, however, vouched for by eyewitnesses living at present in the United States and other parts of the world. The Rev. Kuhlberg himself states that most of the people in our country do not know even a fraction of those terrible and almost unbelievable conditions in Russia, and that even of those there is only a vague apprehension in many. His recent travels through Europe have added important points, and at all times during his sojourn here he has kept in constant touch with the developments overseas.

Although this noted lecturer belonged to the higher nobility of the former Russian Empire, where his ancestors held high positions of trust, his remarks as to the political, economic and social conditions in Russia are entirely unbiased. Among the ancestors of the lecturer we find a general of the Russian armies in the war of Russia with Turkey, and other illustrious men.

Indeed our community should be happy and honored to welcome such a distinguished guest speaker and it is hoped that everyone will take this splendid opportunity offered by the Civic association to further his pursuit for world knowledge. No charge will be made. All expense will be carried by the association. Come and hear strange facts about a far-off and strange land.

W. B. COMBS DIES OF SUDDEN HEART ATTACK

The Tinley Park territory was deeply shocked Sunday morning to learn of the sudden death that morning of Wallace Butler Combs. Mr. Combs, who was employed on the Chicago Western Belt Line railroad, came home from work at one o'clock Sunday morning. About four o'clock he arose and complained to Mrs. Combs of a lumpy feeling in his throat. Thinking it might be a cold Mrs. Combs gave him a home remedy and he appeared relieved. A little while later he complained of a pain in his arm. Mrs. Combs rubbed his arm and he seemed to have less pain. She had just stepped out of the room for a moment when she heard a gasping sound and upon returning to the room found Mr. Combs breathing his last. Dr. Carmichael of Tinley Park was called, and upon arrival, pronounced him dead. Death is attributed to a sudden heart attack. Mr. Combs who was 67 years of age had never been seriously ill in his life and his sudden demise came as a great shock.

He was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., July 29, 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Combs were united in marriage in 1898. They located at Tinley Park about 17 years ago and have resided there since. The deceased was engaged in railroad work for over 37 years.

Surviving are his wife, one son Wallace, Jr., of Chicago and other relatives and a host of friends.

He was a genial man and made a legion of friends. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and also was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Fern Funeral Parlors 79th and Emerald with the Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Community Center of Palos Park officiating. Burial was made in Mount Hope cemetery.

Floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. Many Tinley people attended the funeral.

Mrs. Combs is a noted member of the Englewood Woman's Club and of the Tinley Park Woman's Club which she founded a number of years ago. She has also been very active in garden club circles and was instrumental in the formation of the Tinley Park Garden Club.

During the Chicago World's Fair she was prominently identified in the horticultural department and was elected president of the Century of Progress Horticultural Club.

The many friends of Mrs. Combs deeply sympathize with her in the tragedy which has entered her life.

Place Two Bells In New Tinley Church

Typifying the union of the German and English Methodist church congregations of Tinley Park, the bells of both churches have been hung the past week in the belfry of the new Methodist church in Tinley Park.

The larger of the two bells comes from the former German Methodist church which was destroyed by fire when the building was struck by lightning a few years ago. The bell was cracked due to the intense heat and fall when the tower burned.

This bell has been recast and it is said its tone is as rich and mellow as it was before. This is the only church for miles around having two church bells.

Will Co. Home Bureau Plans County Play Day

Realizing that organized recreational activities are an asset to any community, the Will County Home Bureau has made plans to conduct its first annual county play day to be held at Manhattan on Thursday, February 29.

E. H. Regnier, extension specialist in rural sociology from the University of Illinois, met this week with Mrs. William Wurtz, county chairman of recreation and her committee, and made plans for a full day's program. The meeting will begin at 10:30 and continue until 3 o'clock with a box lunch at noon. This meeting is open to all Home Bureau members, their families, and any other persons who would like to take advantage of securing suggestions for conducting community recreational activities. Each person attending is to bring a box lunch and these will be traded at noon. A small charge for coffee will be made.

Other members of the committee assisting Mrs. Wurtz are: Mrs. Earl Bettenhausen, Mrs. Harold Schuldt, Frankfort; Mrs. Ray Woolley, Plainfield; and Mrs. Harlow Nicholson, Elwood.

Enjoy Memorable Occasion Observance

A most memorable occasion was the celebration of the Golden Wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Habenicht of Orland Park held on February 2.

A service was held at 2:00 p. m. in the Christ Lutheran church conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. Lach, in which a re-consecration of the marriage vows spoken 50 years ago, took place. The processional and recessional marches were played by the couple's daughter, Miss Betty Habenicht, Marvin Schmaedeke sang as a solo "Thanks Be to God."

Following the church service a turkey dinner was served to about 75 relatives and friends in the school hall. The tables were beautifully decorated in gold paper streamers, place cards and flowers and a yellow rose at each place. At the head table where were seated the honored couple, was a large wedding cake decorated in gold with the letters "50" and 2 gold candles on it.

In the evening a reception was held in the home where over 100 guests came to extend congratulations to the bride and groom of 50 years ago. The home was lovely with the many flowers sent as gifts. There were two large wedding cakes and it with coffee was served to the guests during the evening.

Mr. Habenicht, who is 77 years old, was born in Chicago and came to Orland Park when six years old, with his parents, Mrs. Habenicht, who was before her marriage, Miss Bertha Hartwig, was born in Germany and came with her parents to Tinley Park when 10 years of age.

They were married in the Trinity Lutheran church, the Rev. Mr. Beniger officiating. Twelve children were born to this worthy couple and two children to Mr. Habenicht by a former marriage, all of whom were present at this celebration. Also present were the bridesmaid, Mrs. Chris Andres, of Tinley and the best man, Mr. Herman Hartwig, of Minnesota, but because of his inability to be present, his brother, Mr. Ferdinand Hartwig of Tinley Park, served for him. It was a gala occasion and will never be forgotten by Mr. and Mrs. Habenicht.

Scouts To Hear National Director

Mr. Thomas J. Keane, New York, national director of senior scouting, will be the guest speaker at the Annual Appreciation dinner of the Potawatomi Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, February 22, in the new village hall, Homewood. Dinner will be pot-luck style. The parents of Scouts, Committeemen and their wives of the 58 Troops, Packs and Ships are having as their guests, the Scoutmasters, Cubmasters, Skippers, their assistants and their ladies. Tables, Coffee, cream and sugar will be furnished by the Scout Council through the special committee in charge of arrangements which includes N. L. Beck, chairman, Flossmoor; Art Senior and Cecil Clark, Homewood; Oda Nagle, Crete; and True E. Daniels, Tinley Park.

It is expected a crowd in excess of 750 will attend the affair, the largest of its kind ever held in this area, according to Chairman Beck. A special group of Markham ladies are already busy, working up attendance from that community. 86 Markhamites, the largest single delegation present, attended the 1939 dinner held at Bryant school, Harvey. Other communities report keen interest for the dinner this year.

The Arrangements committee has enlisted the aid of the wives of Troop, Pack and Ship committeemen to secure attendance. Ladies enlisted in Mokena and nearby communities are: Mrs. C. S. Nebeker for Troop 40, Mokena Civic club; Mrs. W. R. Schussler, Jr., for Troop 51, Orland Park American Legion Post; Mrs. E. G. Fairbank for Troop 52, Forest Ridge School PTA; Mrs. Walter Johnson for Troop 53, Methodist church of Tinley Park; Mrs. George Sangmeister for Troop 68, Frankfort Civic club.

The program will include community singing, comedy stunts by the Scouts, special awards to leaders and an address by Mr. Tom Keane, New York whose subject is "Scouting—the Bulwark of Democracy," and a special skit arranged for the occasion, "Through Scouting to Citizenship."

Although the dinner arrangements include only parents of boys in Scouting and leaders of Scouting and their wives, the public is invited to witness the program which will begin at 8 p. m.

Washington Social

A Washington Social will be given by the Methodist Sunday school of Frankfort, February 22 at 7:30 p. m. in the social room of the church. Everyone is invited to come and bring friends.

3 Little Foxes Pass Out; 5 Escape

Three foxes were bagged in a big fox hunt Sunday afternoon along the Hickory Creek bottoms and the Brick Tavern fields southwest of Mokena.

About sixty hunters were in the hunt. Robert Maue, Eddie Tierney and Alvin Kohl all of Mokena, each shot a fox. Five foxes were sighted but got away. There is a $3 a head bounty on foxes and the pelts bring various prices according to the size and condition.

Fred Cappel caught a possum alive and the animal was taken to Morry Larson's tavern in Mokena and placed on exhibition.

A muskrat was run over by one of the hunter's cars. As these animals are out of season the hide was worthless.

A number of pheasants were scared out of their hiding places and one bird lit on a high tension line and was blown to pieces by the powerful current.

Girl Scout Investiture Service Feb. 21st

Last fall Mrs. Albert Cappel undertook the responsibility of organizing a girl scout troop in Mokena. Ten girls were enrolled and since that time they have been meeting each Tuesday evening in the school for their study and work as connected with the organization plans.

Mrs. Cappel chose as her assistant, Miss Adamarie Semmler, who has been helping her and the girls to gain their objective, the knowledge of scouting and earning their badges of merits, etc.

Consequently, on next Wednesday evening, February 21, at 8 o'clock, in the auditorium of the public school in Mokena, the Girl Scout investiture ceremony will take place. The Mokena Civic association is co-operating with them in this service to help make it impressive. It is understood that the Civic Association will present the flag to the Girl Scouts at this time.

The girls and their leaders are working hard to make this service most interesting and they hope their friends and all in the community who are interested will attend, as it is open to the public. They are expecting to have their new uniforms for this occasion.

A nice program has been planned which will contain a candle light service; Miss Arline Russ of Joliet, who is director of the Joliet Council and she will have several of her Girl Scouts with her who will take part in the program, and a guest speaker.

It is regrettable that the Girl Scout movement as a whole is not as well organized as the Boy Scouts are, and therefore the work is much harder for the leaders who undertake this character forming work among the girl youth of our country.

Five Thousand At Two Bit Dinner

Contrary to the warnings of Abraham Lincoln, the Democratic administration is using the government as a "crib from which politicians may feed to gain greater control of the people," Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, charged in Naperville last Tuesday. Brooks spoke before the "Two Bit" dinner of the DuPage County Republican organization.

Upward of 5,000 people attended the dinner, which received national recognition when General Chairman Bernard M. Long invited President Roosevelt to attend and eat a 25c dinner in contrast to the recent Democratic $100 plate dinner. Congressman Carl Plumley of Vermont delivered one of the principal addresses. Other Republican candidates headed by Dwight L. Green and Richard J. Lyons, candidates for governor, also addressed the meeting.

Brooks, who is an authority on the life and works of Lincoln, declared that Lincoln's life and death had established his concept of the American government, "that it is an altar upon which to make a sacrifice for continued freedom, and not a crib from which politicians may feed to gain greater control over the lives of all the people."

He declared that the people of America today look upon Lincoln as the symbol of all that this country means in opportunity. His very life established the fundamentals of the American way of living.

"In America we have built a nation wherein the citizen is the master of the State and not the State the master of the citizen. With Abraham Lincoln as our inspiration we must use every power at our command to see that paternalism does not strangle this most precious right. Red-blooded Americans want security of opportunity for themselves, their children and their children's children."

Wm. Sayers, New Lenox Dies Trying To Save Wife From Fire

William Sayers, aged 66 years, widely known resident of New Lenox, died Sunday morning at 4:15 o'clock following fatal burns sustained in an heroic attempt to save his wife during a fire in his home Friday morning caused by an explosion. According to the story told by relatives the events leading up to the fatal tragedy were as follows:

Mr. Sayers arose at four o'clock Friday morning and went down in the basement to attend to the furnace fire. After returning to the upstairs Mr. Sayers went back to bed. About five o'clock Mrs. Sayers arose to prepare breakfast. She first went to the basement to see about the furnace fire, leaving the basement door open. Gas which had collected in the basement from the furnace which evidently had been closed too tight, filled the upstairs rooms. When Mrs. Sayers came back upstairs and lit the fire of the gas stove under the coffee pot, there suddenly was a terrific explosion and in an instant the gas fumes became ignited.

The theory above advanced is now being accepted as the most plausible one instead of the earlier story of gas escaping from a partly opened valve of the gas stove for the reason that the pots and pans on the gas stove had not been disturbed or blown from the stove as would have been the case had there been a gas explosion from the stove. This story is also given credence by the Insurance adjusters.

Mrs. Sayers went for a pail of water and tried to put the fire out. At this point her daughter, Mrs. Bess Reed, rushed into the kitchen to get her mother out. Mrs. Sayers, with the aid of her daughter was just about in the living room when she fell. Another daughter, Miss Ruth Sayers appeared and with the aid of both daughters, the mother was finally taken out of the blazing home and over to the home of Mrs. Lillian McCleary, a neighbor.

In the meantime, Mr. Sayers, thinking that his wife was still in the burning room, made a dive into the flames in a vain attempt to save her. Both daughters returning to the burning home attempted to get their father out of the place but could not convince him that their mother was out of the house. They finally got him out of the house, but in his excited mind Mr. Sayers still thought his wife was in danger, ran around the house, took a storm window off and smashed the inner window and got back into the house to get his trousers. Mr. Sayers was finally taken out of the home by Robert McFinal.

Sale Draws Crowd

The public sale held on the Herman Subbert farm near Frankfort last Friday was very largely attended and good prices were realized. Erickson & Schmaedeke were the auctioneers.

Cleary and Walter Gougar, Jr., who were awakened by the screams of the women. He was taken to the McCleary home and Dr. Jeanette Holt of New Lenox was summoned. She found Mr. Sayers had sustained serious burns about the head and body and ordered him to be taken to Silver Cross hospital at once. His two sons, Harold and Dick and Walter Gougar, Jr., quickly rushed him there. Every effort was made to alleviate the suffering of the stricken man, but he grew rapidly worse and the end came early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Sayers, who had received bad burns on her head, face and hands, and suffered from shock, was later taken to the home of another daughter, Mrs. Howard Ayers, and placed in bed and given medical aid.

Mrs. Bess Reed was seriously burned about the face and hands and her son Robert was burned about the neck. Her sister, Miss Ruth Sayers escaped injury.

Mrs. Burton Gillette, the New Lenox telephone operator, summoned all the aid she could get. A bucket brigade was quickly formed and the flames were put out, saving the dwelling.

The interiors of the living and dining room and kitchen were completely ruined by the fire, all the wall paper burned off and the furniture was reduced to charcoal. All the woodwork was charred. Electric light bulbs melted from the intense heat, rugs on the floor were burned. The flames had spread to the upstairs and burned some clothes. There was no furniture in the upper rooms.

Windows were blown out by the force of the explosion. A spool and thread on a sewing machine burned but the thread threaded through the machine did not ignite. The collar of a coat hanging over a chair was burned off the coat, but outside of that the coat was in good shape.

Mr. Sayers is survived by his wife, three sons, Willard, Harold and Walter; four daughters, Mrs. Howard A. Ayres, Mrs. Bessie Reed, Mrs. Joseph Novak, and Miss Ruth Sayers; one brother, Walter of Orland; two sisters, Mrs. Fannie Ormond of Decatur and Mrs. Peter Sinclair of New Lenox and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the Sonntag funeral home in Joliet, Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock with the Rev. William Ellis, pastor of the New Lenox Methodist church officiating. Burial was made in the Maplewood cemetery, New Lenox.

Mr. Sayers was born in Orland township and was the son of the late Job Sayers.

Science Probes Mysteries of Sleep To Find New Cure for Our Troubles

By GEORGE BERNARD

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
SALESMEN and scientists are sitting up nights figuring ways to make us sleep.

They've invented ear plugs, eye shades, V-shaped pillows, silent radios, electric comforters whose warmth can be regulated—and even a gadget called the "tullaphone" whose drowsy hum has you yawning in no time.

The reason is obvious: Physicians and psychologists have examined our nerve-racked civilization and decided that a few good nights' sleep would cure most of the world's troubles.

They've probed the mysteries of hibernation, dreams, nightmares and insomnia. Most important, they've invented a powerful weapon called "frozen sleep" which may provide the cure for neurotic and physical ailments.

Men Must Sleep or Die.

But sleep remains one of the body's greatest mysteries. It is hard to believe that we should surrender our complete consciousness willingly for eight hours every night, yet usually we crawl into bed happily after a hard day's work. We know this is the price we must pay for being one of the "higher" animals.

That is why science is concentrating on methods to induce sleep, both natural and inspired. The prime requisite is complete relaxation the moment you jump into bed.

RELAXATION, PLUS!—A fruit vendor along the Amazon in Brazil enjoys his siesta. Between loads he flops in one basket and pulls the other over him.

What the world needs, says Ray Giles, noted writer on sleep, is a dictator who could make it a penal offense to boast about sleeplessness. Most people who wait at breakfast, "I didn't sleep a wink last night," have actually been snoring loudly at the very hour they claim to have been awake.

But if people would brag about how well they sleep, Giles thinks, they would go to bed at night and actually rest better for having decided to do so. A good day's work is also important. Even if you're unemployed you can sleep well if you go to bed saying, honestly: "This was a terrible day and I got nowhere at all. But I did my best. Now for a good night's sleep so that I can do my best tomorrow."

One of the first persons to sleep "raw" was old Benjamin Franklin, but in recent years it's become so popular that in New York 40 per cent of the women and 25 per cent of the men sleep as did Adam and Eve in the garden—stark and comfortably naked. Physicians recommend it because it favors skin ventilation.

Subconscious Mind Won't Sleep.

Experts aren't agreed about dreams. Some maintain there's a morbid and unhealthy feature about them, yet no one has discovered a method of stilling our subconscious mind, which insists on working 25 hours a day. As a matter of fact, many a problem has been solved by people who go to bed at night weighted down with troubles and resolved to "sleep on them." The poet Coleridge awoke one morning and instantly transcribed the poem "Kubla Khan" which his subconscious mind had written during his sleep.

The new "frozen sleep" is probably an adaptation of hibernation or of the ancient Egyptian criminal punishment. Instead of being sentenced to death, law breakers of King Tut's day were put into a state of coma and buried. It was discovered that, although a lengthy burial would tend to shorten their lives, it also cured them of their diseases.

This is because healing processes work faster than destructive germs during sleep.

Russians Hibernate.

Dr. Lawrence W. Smith and Dr. Temple Fay of Temple University had probably heard of human hibernation before they began their epochal frozen sleep experiments several years ago. In the Russian steppes, it is reported, large groups of villagers lie down and permit their bodies to become gradually colder until they enter a state similar to hibernation. They remain that way for weeks, saving food.

The Smith-Fay experiments were first publicized last year at a St. Louis convention of the American Medical association. With motion pictures, the scientists showed how cancer sufferers—obviously in pain—were put to sleep by lowering the body temperature. After a mild injection of avertin enema, ice was packed about the upper portion of the body much as a fish is packed for shipping. The resultant cooling of the blood stream was much like the experience of one who freezes to death in a snowstorm, a process which is not at all painful.

Body Processes Cease.

After the patients had been put to sleep the room temperatures were lowered. Frozen sleep was maintained for as long as five days but it might be prolonged indefinitely. Pulse beat in the arms and legs disappeared and only an electrocardiograph could detect the quiet and measured strokes of the heart. Kidneys and intestines ceased to function.

The scientists do not claim their treatment will cure cancer, but the tissue of several external tumors was destroyed by the process. Patients invariably awakened to find their pain entirely disappeared. They had no idea how long they had slept. It had been a perfect rest; something doctors are always trying to get for damaged bodies.

Why, scientists now ask, cannot the frozen sleep cure be used to attack tuberculosis and other ailments which require complete relaxation? Will it be useful to replace anesthetic in complicated surgical operations, or to help the patient rest during convalescence?

FROZEN SLEEP—At Weehawken, N. J., a patient is treated with broth after coming out of hibernation. This cancer victim is still wrapped in her freezing blanket after taking the new treatment in which her body temperature was lowered to 91 degrees.

Chimpanzees, Poisonous Snakes Among 'Pets' of Manhattanites

NEW YORK.—If you're looking for common everyday pets like cats and dogs, don't come to Manhattan. In this city of towers you'll find as unique a collection of domesticated animals as ever answered to a master's summons.

J. H. Harper, a movie producer, has as his constant companion a huge Siberian husky which an Alaskan friend sent him two years ago. Harper was broke at the time and the animal brought him so much notoriety that he secured financial backing for a new motion picture venture.

"Tad," the husky, has acclimated himself perfectly to the hustling life of New York, strange though it may be to a dog of his temperament. He used to howl at the moon until Harper began keeping him under the bed. He feared stairs until he once conquered them. Then Tad spent the next hour running up and down.

She Likes Apes!

Mrs. Gertrude Lintz of Brooklyn dates her passion for chimpanzees to the day 20 years ago in Vienna, when she saw youngsters throwing stones at a frightened pair of apes in a zoo. She was so impressed with the way the male tried to shield his trembling mate that she resolved to study them.

"I knew then that there was something within these human-like animals that I must come to understand," she recalls.

Today she has three female chimpanzees in her home. They live like humans, arising early for breakfast, walking through the Lintz estate and taking regular baths. Mrs. Lintz dresses them as she would children. Recently one of the apes, Peggy Ann, behaved better than the average little girl when forced to sit through a banquet and three hours of tedious after-dinner speeches.

It's Snakes With Him.

Harold J. O'Connell, successful New York business man, has snakes as his hobby.

"Most people have an aversion to them," he admits, "but this feeling is not inherent. Babies can be given a small snake and they will show no fear whatever. Fear of snakes comes solely through the frightening stories told by mothers, nurse maids and friends about the supposed evil nature of reptiles."

PETS NOW, BUT—Three little lion cubs held in Claire Balson's arms are cute now, but wait until they grow up and start making faces at people!

O'Connell began collecting snakes many years ago, housing them in his home until Mrs. O'Connell's patience finally ended. Then he rented a store building until the neighbors objected. Today they're housed in special quarters at the Staten island zoo, and their sponsor continues his trips to the wilds in search of new specimens. There's still one species he hasn't captured, a viper three times as venomous as any other in this hemisphere. When he catches that, he will feel his life is complete.

Pets Help an Author.

Fannie Hurst, the writer, keeps as her pets a white cat, a terrier and a tiny marmoset. She claims they help her with her work. As a student at the University of Washington she was expelled for refusing to dispose of her devoted terrier. In subsequent years her friends have sent her monkeys, a cockatoo, a Siamese cat and young tigers. She liked all of them, but there are limits to what you can keep in a Manhattan apartment.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by
CARTER FIELD

Washington hears that Postmaster General Farley would be willing to go on the Democratic national ticket with Garner or Wheeler... Lack of war boom made an argument for continued government spending... Rival labor camps' wooing of Senator Wheeler arouses interest in Washington.

WASHINGTON.—Friends of Postmaster General James A. Farley have been flirting with two of the rival camps in the campaign for the Democratic national sweepstakes. According to normally reliable sources, Postmaster Jim is willing to accept the vice presidential nomination with either John Nance Garner or Sen. Burton K. Wheeler at the top of the ticket.

James A. Farley

Normally this sort of information, coming from the sources it does, would be absolutely reliable. But no report about the maneuvering of a presidential candidate or his managers is to be accepted at par. The very essence of any campaign for a nomination is that friendly feelings be engendered so far as possible with all the opposing groups, including even the rival candidates themselves, if possible.

The point is that the time comes in every hard-fought convention, such as the Democrats had in Baltimore in 1912, in San Francisco in 1920, in New York in 1924, and even in Chicago, in 1932, when certain compromises must be made. It often happens that a minority candidate, who never had an earthly hope of success, will be able to settle the final result in one of those smoke-filled room conferences. In other instances the lieutenants of a candidate may decide to throw their support elsewhere.

Naturally, new promises are the most important factor in reaching decisions at such times, but it does happen that if certain enemies have been created during the pre-convention campaign, these are pretty nearly as important.

Here's an Idea of How These Affairs Work Out

For example, to use an absurd illustration, let us assume that the approaching convention should reach a deadlock, and that, in a tense midnight session of leaders, the men supporting the candidacy of Robert H. Jackson should offer to compromise on Harold L. Ickes. Can anyone doubt that the Paul V. McNutt leaders would threaten to bolt the convention to prevent such a choice?

Now it is a tribute to Harold Ickes' common sense in realizing he would under no circumstances have a Chinaman's chance for the nomination, that he took it upon himself to blast McNutt publicly out of the New Deal. If Ickes had been secretly hoping for the nomination he would never have made those cracks against the Hoosier candidate.

In contrast, there are not many candidates for the Democratic nomination this time—save Roosevelt himself—that Jack Garner has not slapped on the back and wished success—intimating that of course his own candidacy is not really serious! Nobody believes Cactus Jack when he says this—or at least not after thinking it over—but the warm feeling persists just the same.

Now the Farley hints to the Garner and Wheeler camps may be a little more of the same, only more subtle, but there are those in Washington who take them as 100 per cent genuine.

Confident Government Will Go Back to Wild Spending

Advocates of continued government spending to take care of the unemployment situation and in the hope of "pump priming"—while temporarily being ignored by the administration—are absolutely confident that the government will have to swing back to their theory.

For one thing they insist that the war situation is not going to solve our domestic problems. War orders, they insist, are being grossly exaggerated. More important, they are mostly for airplanes and munitions, on the theory that Britain and France are buying all the food and other nonmilitary items they can elsewhere. The reason for this is chiefly the Johnson act, which prevents further credits to governments which have defaulted on previous loans.

It so happens that most of the Dominions still owe money to Great Britain, thus being in the same financial relationship that the United States was in 1914. That alone makes it easier to buy from them, aside from the natural tendency of Great Britain to "Buy British," and thus cement the ties of empire. But even more important is the fact that Britain can obtain necessary goods on credit in nearly every other producing country in the world, or else can create the exchange needed to buy the supplies by her own exports.

For example, take the Argentine republic. Britain is eager to buy her grain and her beef. The United States is not willing to buy either, this being the primary reason why the recently attempted negotiations for a reciprocal trade treaty with the Argentine broke down. So it is a comparatively easy matter for Britain to sell her manufactured goods in Argentina, competing directly with the products of the United States, and thus pay for needed foodstuffs which could be obtained by a much shorter ship haul from the United States.

British Subjects Want Home-Grown Meat Favored

As a matter of fact this was true before the war. Certain British subjects, particularly in the sheep-raising sections of Scotland, have long criticized the policy of the British government of encouraging beef imports from the Argentine instead of favoring home-grown meat. Sir Charles Ross, for example, one of the big landowners in the Scotch highlands, claims that the British farmer has been exploited by the British government in this respect in order that British manufacturers could sell their products to South America.

So on the whole the spending crowd in Washington does not think much of the war boom prosperity idea, either for war exports proper or for the United States supplanting the belligerents in the neutral markets. They admit that Germany is out for the duration of the war as a competitor, but insist that Britain is apt to take over the lion's share of the trade that was Germany's.

Rival Labor Camps Wooing Of Wheeler Causes Talk

William Green's invitation to Sen. Burton K. Wheeler to attend the American Federation of Labor party in connection with the "President's Birthday Cake" caused a good many smiles in Washington. There is no particular importance, of course, in an invitation to anyone to this particular party. Invitations were sent out freely. The significance lies in the fact that the invitation to Senator Wheeler was announced.

This came right on the heels of John L. Lewis' invitation to Senator

William Green

Wheeler to address the convention of the United Mine Workers, and came after Lewis had denounced President Roosevelt, John Nance Garner and Paul V. McNutt, three of the outstanding names on the Democratic list of possible nominees.

Which more or less put Lewis pretty well up on the Wheeler bandwagon.

But it has been one of the favorite boasts of American Federation of Labor leaders for years that the C. I. O. had never won a primary or an election except where the A. F. of L. was also on that side. So the jokers around Washington are saying that Green must think Senator Wheeler has a pretty good chance for the nomination, and doesn't want the possibility of a C. I. O. victory for anything or anybody—politically—without A. F. of L. aid.

The truth is that there is no clear case in political history where any labor organization swung the result, whether organized labor leaders were a unit or not. There are a number of cases about which labor leaders boast, but skeptics can find plenty of justification for doubting if they will examine all the facts in any campaign cited.

The C. I. O. was enthusiastic in 1932 about the defeat for renomination of Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio. But it developed that the A. F. of L. leaders had also been against Davey.

They Nominated Their Man But Couldn't Elect Him

But both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., though it may be admitted that they had nominated a candidate for governor of Ohio, were not able to elect him, once nominated. Actually John W. Bricker was elected governor in the ensuing election. Curiously enough the same sort of thing happened in Oregon, where the C. I. O., the A. F. of L. and Harold L. Ickes all ganged up against the Democratic governor's renomination, and beat him. At any rate he was beaten. But in the ensuing election a Republican won.

The prize case cited by labor leaders as to winning an election goes all the way back to 1922, when Democratic Sen. Atlee Pomerene of Ohio was defeated after serving 12 years. Pomerene was certainly defeated, but it so happens that the dregs were bitterly against him in the same election. As a matter of fact the Anti-Saloon league, then at the height of its power, arranged to have sermons preached against Pomerene in most of the Protestant churches on the Sunday before election.

As the state had voted, just two years before that election, for the most obnoxious search and seizure dry enforcement act in the country—the Crabbe act—by 250,000, it might be suspected that perhaps the dregs had more to do with beating Pomerene than the labor leaders.

CHAPTER I

Moses Lafayette O'Leary tossed his soiled pith helmet to a coolie. Sweat streamed down his almost liver-colored face from a mass of black hair that curled with quite un-oriental vigor. He looked like a vaudeville Irish version of a Hindu without a turban. He squinted toward the setting sun. The Kadur River, where it circled the city wall, was blood-red.

"Blood!" he remarked. "If I was superstitious—"

He entered Captain Carl Norwood's tent. Norwood's native servant objected. O'Leary smote the servant. He removed a whiskey bottle, two long tumblers and a siphon from the ice-box at the rear, and came out winking at Sergeant Stoddart, who was shirt-sleeved, sweating, muscular and thirsty.

"Caught you!" said Stoddart. O'Leary grinned. "All you're fit to catch is hell and malaria. I'm taking pity on you. Here." They sat, on cases of surveyors' instruments, facing each other. O'Leary observed:

"As a sergeant of sappers, you're a sap sergeant. You believe you're here to find out why the Kadur River is all silted up. As if nobody knew it. You'll sweat. You'll wade. You'll work. You'll catch diseases; and you'll draw your pay, if you live. Pretty soon now you'll be sent home on a troop-ship to tell the English in the pubs how you'd rule India if you was commander-in-chief. You'd look handsome in a cocked hat."

"Kid yourself you know a lot, don't you?" said Stoddart. "This is good whiskey."

"Sure I know a lot. I'm three men. You're only what's left of one, and white at that. I draw one-third your pay for using three times your brains. You only know what you're told, all tripe and army regulations. Hindsight. Mine's foresight."

"You're like all Eurasians," said Stoddart. "You'd bet on all three horses in a three-horse race, and then set yourself up as a clairvoyant, along of having picked the winner. The secret of why the Kadur River has silted up is like a dog's bone that he buries in sight of half the county. The priests have a diamond mine, and they're critturs o' habit. They dig by day. Come nighttime, they've been dumping clay into the river since Noah's Deluge."

"Don't you take the Scriptures in vain," said O'Leary. "Noah was a saint, which is more than you are. Stick to your river survey. Watch out that the dam don't break and learn you what a deluge is. Your job is to work with a dumpy and tape and a couple o' poles, and set down figures to be stuck away in a file. My job's to look for the reasons o' things. I'm good at it."

"I'll admit," said Stoddart, "you could find a drink in the Sahara. What'd you kid yourself you're here to find out?"

"I might risk giving you another drink if you could tell me where the Captain's heading for this minute."

"Easy," said Stoddart. "Pass the bottle. Captain Norwood is on his way to the Residency to report arrival."

O'Leary kept his hand on the bottle. "What else?"

"Nothing else. Regulation routine. In case you don't happen to know it, and you're an ignorant savage, a Resident at the court of a Maharajah is an Army officer who's no good at soldiering. So they put him in the 'political.' As a rule he's no good at that either. He's a sort of ambassador. He attends functions. And he keeps out o' trouble whenever he can. They tell me this Resident is a dabster at doing nothing and keeping it wrapped in cellophane."

O'Leary passed the bottle. "Well, you get your drink, but you don't deserve it. I'll bet my month's pay against yours that the Captain's in trouble already. Trouble's what he came here for. Did you ever know Norwood not to get what he's after?"

"There's someone else after something," said Stoddart, staring over the rim of his tumbler, beyond O'Leary. "I'll bet you know who he is. And I'll bet you know what he wants, you bleeding ferret. What is it?"

"You'd better scram," O'Leary answered. "Secrets and sergeants don't mix good."

Stoddart snorted: "There you go, murdering the King's English, as well as not minding your own business. You picked up the word scram in the movies and you think it's clever. The trouble with you is, Moses, that you try to talk too many languages, but you can't shoot a bee-line in one of them. Talk English."

"I will," said O'Leary. "You scram. That gentleman who's making you so curious is going to have to talk English too, on account o' my dignity."

"Who is he?"

"He's the oil-can."

"Meaning what?" asked Stoddart.

"He looks greasy enough from the heat, but you haven't looked at him, so you didn't mean that."

"All right, I'll educate you. After that, you scram and learn English. I'm keeping him waiting o' purpose."

"On account of your dignity?"

"No. My dignity is like that bottle nose o' yours: it's been punched a time or two, but there it is. It's inseparable and I'll be buried with it. I'm keeping him waiting on account o' his indignity that needs a bit o' taking notice of, so it won't be no secret from him. His name is Noor Mahlam. No, not baa-lamb. Mahlam. He's the oil-can that goes around dripping the lies into the local works to make 'em grind good, and smell rotten and sound scandalous."

"Reporter for the local paper?" asked Stoddart.

"No. He's from the underworld district."

Stoddart grinned. "Seeing he's a friend of yours, I might have guessed that."

"You've drunk your drink, so scram."

"I'd like another drink."

"I wouldn't be good for you, and you know it. What you want is in-

"Sir I might make it a hundred."

formation. Well, I'll tell you. Kadur City is hot."

"You bet it's hot," said Stoddart. "It's a hundred and five this minute, in the shade of my awning. But I suppose you didn't mean that."

"It's tough all right," said O'Leary, "but perhaps Lahore goes it one worse."

"I never was in Lahore," said Stoddart.

"That's why you're still in the Army. Stay away from Lahore, and maybe you'll get home safe to England with a pension. Lahore is full o' women who'd as soon knife you as look at you."

"Yes, I know what you mean. I've heard tell of 'em."

"And those women o' Lahore," said Moses O'Leary, "are about the square root of one-tenth of one per cent as bad as the men. This man Noor Mahlam, who is squinting right now at the back o' my neck, is a jewel in the crown of Kadur's infamy."

"What do you suppose he wants?" asked Stoddart.

"He wants news, you sapper. He wants to know why Captain Catch-em-alive-o Carl Norwood is in Kadur."

"You'll tell him?"

"Bet your boots and medals I'll tell him."

"Will you give him a drink?"

"I will not. For the sake of a harmless innocent like you I don't mind letting down my dignity at times. But I wouldn't steal Captain Norwood's whiskey for that buzzard."

"He doesn't look like a buzzard. He looks fat and good natured."

Moses Lafayette O'Leary took a private swig from the bottle inside Norwood's tent, and then put it away in the chop-box. With his hands in his trouser pockets for the sake of dignity, he strode toward the tree beneath which Noor Mahlam sat wondering how to broach the subject of his meditations. He did not appear to be wondering. His black turban only partly concealed a philosopher's forehead. His silver-brimmed spectacles enhanced the mellow mildness of intelligent dark brown eyes. His nose was fleshy and good humored. His black beard and moustache were well cared for. They concealed something. His mouth was not in evidence. He arose to greet Moses O'Leary and, judging by the movement of his beard, he smiled, but the smile was invisible. At close quarters it was evident that his bulk was mostly fat, not muscle. He fitted flabbily into a bazaar-made black alpaca European suit.

"How'd you do, Noor Mahlam."

"How do you do, sir."

Moses O'Leary straightened himself slightly and drew his right hand from his pocket. He had to live up to being addressed as "sir" by a man of means from the underworld district. But it stirred his alertness. His suspicion, and more than that, was already wide awake. His voice hardened a trifle:

"Sit down, Noor Mahlam. Hot, isn't it? No, I'll stay on my feet. I've business to attend to. Can't spare you more than a minute or two."

"How did you know my name, sir?" asked Noor Mahlam in silky accents that suggested there was something else than silk beneath. It was a quiet agreeable voice, unless one listened to it too attentively.

Moses O'Leary smiled with the pride of the expert who needs no praise to justify his self-esteem:

"It's my job to know things. Check me. You were a lawyer. You served a term in prison in Cawnpore for cheating a client. You were disbarred. And now you're cheating everybody. Am I right?"

"Sir, I'm a public relations counselor. It is a new profession, in India."

"It's a new name for an old game," said O'Leary. "But you've come to the right place. I'm the publicity man o' this surveying party. What do you want?"

Noor Mahlam looked bland and

Ancient Jewish Coins Found to Be of Historical Value

An exhibit of ancient Jewish coins symbolic of the Maccabean period, displayed at a Jewish theological seminary in New York recently, presented an interesting insight into the customs and laws of that early day.

The coins, struck in the two centuries preceding and following the start of the Christian era, are of silver, gold and copper. They are of two classifications—those struck by the Jews themselves and those minted by their various Roman governors.

Because Jewish law forbids the use of graven images, there are few portrait heads in the collection. The most common decorative motifs are sacred objects—the jug, the palm branch, the citron, the holy tabernacle, trumpet, the Menorah and the palm tree, the last a symbol of plenty in Palestine.

There is little of artistic merit in the collection. Apparently the Maccabean coins were strictly utilitarian, for the Jews who coined them wasted little time displayed at the Jewish Theological beautiful. Many of them have been struck over old Roman coins, and in their haste the Jewish craftsmen failed to obliterate the Roman inscriptions.

The speed with which these coins were made is demonstrated, in some instances, by imperfect imprint. Some of these imprints cover only half the face of the old Roman coins. Coins of the revolutionary period bear the Hebrew inscription, "To the freedom of Jerusalem," and the date, 1, 2, 3, or 4, corresponding to the year of the revolt.

In the second group of coins—those struck by the Roman governors—much of historical value is revealed. Many of the bear profile portraits of Vespasian, Domitian or Titus, in whose reigns they were struck off.

Many of the coins issued by the Roman procurators of Palestine show a Jewish influence. These coins do not bear the Roman initials "S. C." since they were struck without the authority of the senate and merely at the emperor's command. This was possible, since Palestine remained an imperial province.

Some of the coins were embellished with reproductions of inanimate creatures instead of the reigning Caesar.

innocent. His eyes were as kind as the milk of the moon, but his mouth remained hidden. He wiped the sweat off his face with a handkerchief, then removed his spectacles and wiped them too, before he answered:

"I want nothing, Mr. O'Leary."

"You're a lucky bloke!"

"I came to enquire if I can be useful. If I could have the ear of your officer—"

"I'm it. I'm both ears. I'm his teacher, his keeper, his nurse, his confidential secret'ry, his father confessor and information man."

"Sir, if you are truly in Captain Norwood's confidence—"

"Try me. Him and me are like the two sides of a rupee. And it's a two-headed rupee. He'd believe me even if I was to tell him you're honest."

"I could reciprocate, Mr. O'Leary. There are many people to whom it is highly important to know why Captain Norwood is in Kadur."

"Have you heard about the survey of the Kadur River?"

"Yes, Mr. O'Leary, but nobody believes that."

"Well, it's the fact. We're here to run a survey of the Kadur River."

"Ah! But of what else than the river? I am commissioned to offer rupees fifty for correct information."

"And me a poor man! If I weren't a good Christian and afraid to take the name of the Lord in vain, I'd be critical o' your conscience. D'you think it's decent to insult my poverty with an offer o' fifty rupees?"

"Sir, I might make it a hundred."

"You'll have to make it twice that before I'll hesitate. Besides, I don't think I need you."

"Mr. O'Leary, I think you underestimate my value. There is nothing that I don't know about the politics of Kadur. I am the trusted informant of people in very high places."

"High?" said O'Leary. "In the magistrates' courts they call 'em low places. You can go look for another customer. Captain Norwood's decent."

"Ah, but how about you?"

"I know how to take care o' myself. What'd you take me for? A tourist?"

"Sahib, I can tell you actual, authentic facts about the palace."

The word "sahib" was a mistake. It stiffened O'Leary's feeling of superiority. It spurred him to contemptuous offensive tactics:

"I don't believe you. What's new at the palace?"

GOOD CITIZENS AND GOOD NEIGHBORS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 22:15-22, 34-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matthew 22:39.

Character is determined by what a man is in his heart, not by the profession of his lips. This is eminently true in spiritual matters, for we know that it is not by much testifying, hymn singing, or even by church attendance that a man proves himself to be a Christian. The question is, Is his heart right with God? It is also true in his relation to his country. Patriotism is not a matter of speech-making and flag-waving, but an inward devotion to the good of the nation. Most assuredly it is also true that being a good neighbor is not something accomplished by smooth talk or the shedding of a few tears; it is a matter of that right attitude toward our neighbor, whether he be the man next door or in China, which results in a sacrificial effort to serve and help him.

I. A Right Attitude Toward God (vv. 21, 37-39).

No man will make any real progress in the direction of being either a good citizen or a good neighbor until he has a right attitude toward God.

The questions which were asked of our Lord, and which brought forth such precious teaching from Him, were not asked in good will nor with a desire to glorify God, but rather to entrap or snare the Lord and thus give occasion for denouncing Him. Had the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians (the ritualists, the rationalists, and politicians of our Lord's day) really known God and Jesus Christ, His Son, their problems of patriotism and neighborliness would have been solved in the light of His Word and, what is perhaps even more important, in His spirit.

Is not the crying need of our world today, gone mad as it has with misdirected and perverted patriotic fervor and forgetting all responsibilities of good neighborliness, that it should hear and heed the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ?

II. A Right Attitude Toward Government (vv. 15-22).

The subtle hypocrisy of the question in verse 17 lay in the fact that these leaders were not interested in knowing the truth, but only wanted to make Jesus out either to be disloyal to His own people because He advocated paying tribute, or a traitor to Caesar because He advised rebellion against taxation. They coated their clever bait with unctuous flattery, a device which is still common among those who would mislead God's people. Observe that even though they did not believe what they said, they did speak the truth about the Lord Jesus (v. 16).

His answer is complete, final, and unanswerable. He has that kind of an answer to every honest question of man. In this case He clearly states that one who lives under an established government, enjoying its protection, using its money in trade, and so forth, is to be loyal to every proper obligation to that government. God and the things of God must come first, but a right attitude toward God will reveal itself in a proper attitude toward government.

Why does not some nation realize that the answer to destructive political and social theories is—win the destructive agitator to a living faith in Christ and he will become your strongest force for God and country. The real answer to communism (and every other anti-Americanism) is Christ.

III. A Right Attitude Toward Our Neighbor (vv. 34-40).

We have talked a good deal of late about being good neighbors, and certainly everyone should do everything possible to encourage the good neighbor policy in his own community and throughout the earth. But why does not the good neighbor policy work? Read the parallel passage in Luke and you will see how man tries to dodge his responsibility. See Luke 10:29 and observe the answer of Jesus in Luke 10:30-37.

A good neighbor is not one who is seeking some kind of "You favor me and I'll favor you" arrangement. He does not see the barriers of race, creed, or color. He is ready to help anyone, anywhere, at any cost. It is recognized that only the man who loves God with all his heart will be able thus to love his neighbor as himself.

The world does not so much need treatises on neighborliness as the winning of men and women to faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thus to a whole-hearted love for God which will inevitably express itself in a love for his neighbor. When this comes to pass, we shall have true neighborliness in the world. Let us send the gospel to all nations, that they may become first of all good Christians, then good citizens, and good neighbors.

Worship service and Sunday school held in the Tinley school gym. Sunday School 9:30 a. m.

The spirit of the Tinley Park Methodist church has been rising as the church continues on its march toward completion. The formal opening has been set for the first Sunday in June when Bishop Waldorf will be one of the main speakers. It has been with much interest that the work of the past week has been done. The masonry work is all finished and the beauty of this sanctuary—a building erected to the worship of God and the furtherance of His Kingdom far exceeds the anticipation. Its stately solemnity calls one to remember God—reminds one of things higher in life than mere material living alone.

Anxious ears are waiting to hear the peal of the two bells that are in the belfry. These come to the church from the two merging congregations. One, the larger of the two, was broken in the recent fire. But it is happily announced that it has been recast, and its rich mellow tone is comparable to the original—in fact it has been said that it is the same tone.

The stately beauty of this new building is to be carried out, even in the windows. These are to be beautiful, colored and designed glass windows, in harmony and keeping with the general architecture and each one will be placed as a memorial. Already when this goes to press there remain only a few of the twenty-six windows that have not been spoken for.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 11.

The Golden Text was, "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling: One Lord, one faith, one baptism. One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and you in all" (Ephesians 4:4-6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, being God, there is but one Spirit, for there can be but one infinite and therefore one God. There are neither spirits many nor gods many. There is no evil in Spirit, because God is Spirit" (pp. 334-5).

An interesting feature of the evening were the following poems composed in honor of the occasion by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cooper:

20th ANNIVERSARY

Twenty years ago today
Horse drawn vehicles
Were still on the high way.
Well I remember a flurry
'Twas the twelfth of February.
We borrowed dad's surrey;
Wedding bells were ringing,
A grand occasion to see
For Charlie's twin brother,
A handsome groom was to be.
Yes, a comely farmer's daughter
He had won for himself you see.
About fifteen miles south,
Between Orland and Kankakee.
They had waited long and patiently
For the war had intervened.
Now the new home was built and waiting.

Fond hopes were coming true
As the pastor asked God's blessing
On the union of these two.
Now four pretty daughters
Have come to share their happiness,
As Tom and Laura have walked
life's way,
During twenty years of wedded bliss.

20th ANNIVERSARY

Twenty years ago near Frankfort's busy town,
A young couple there were married,
And came here to settle down.
Their friends from far and near rejoined

With young Thomas and his wife
And wished them joy and happiness throughout their wedded life.
Twenty years ago they trod
Down the wedding isle;
Twenty years ago they wore the latest style

And at the appointed time
Together knelt in prayer,
Rev. Tonjes blessed and joined them
In matrimony there.

Twenty years ago with their faces
smiling bright
Do you think that they were happier
Than they are here tonight?

Twenty years ago, oh how the time has flown;
It does not seem but yet it is, for
Their children are quite grown.

And day by day from morn till nite
They've toiled and worked together.
They've kept their home and fireside bright

Regardless of the weather,
Thru health and sickness they have been

A joy to one another.
Their children look in pride and say:
"Dear Father, Faithful Mother"

And they in pride can look upon
Their family of four.

The one they love the very best
They truly cannot tell,
Nor could we were we asked to say.
We like them all so well.

There's Lucile who has many friends both far and near,
Has a smile for all she knows.

And Eleanor is loved by all,
No matter where she goes.
And Lila also has brought
Much gladness and bliss;

And Carol so cute and fair
Where could be found a sweeter
Miss?

Thru all these years they have been blessed,
They could not ask for more.

For health and wealth and happiness
Have been right at their door,
And thirty years from now
When their hair is silver gray.

We hope that we can celebrate
Their golden wedding day,
And may those years be joyous ones
To make their burden light;

And may they be so happy
As both are here tonight.

Five minutes later he strolled into the shelter, boasting, "What on earth's all this fuss about? I stayed behind to dress. Why, I didn't like my first choice of a tie, so I changed it!"

"Fine," said the other guests, "but where are your trousers?"

Whose Signature? 'Proxy Parents' Live to Collect

In a recent experiment the Chicago Police Crime Detection Laboratory had seven college professors differentiate between four samples of their signatures, one being genuine, one an expert forgery, one a tracing and one written with no attempt at imitation. Only one man identified his own signature as genuine and recognized the other three specimens as nongenuine.

A new organization in New York supplies capable young women between the ages of 20 and 30 years to act as "proxy parents," taking children to theaters, schools, parties, dentists' offices and on shopping tours. They also stay with children while parents are away for the week-end, and meet trains and chaperon girls who come to the city for a visit.

SOUP GIVES THE FIRST IMPRESSION

See Recipes Below.

Satisfying Soups

Soup, like the front door, gives a first impression, good or bad, that is difficult to overcome, whatever follows.

It's the cook's fault if this first course at dinner isn't good, for a great many wholesome ingredients can be made into delicious soups if they are knowingly handled.

Beginning with good ingredients and finishing off with skillful seasoning, there's no reason why you can't produce a soup that is tempting, delicious and wholly satisfying.

Soup is more than just a means of using up left-overs and remnants of meat and vegetables, but left-overs may be the starting point for a cream soup that's a masterpiece; season it with discrimination, thicken it smoothly, serve it hot and nicely garnished, and you have evolved the perfect beginning for a dinner, or a satisfying mainstay dish for lunch.

Finely chopped parsley, paprika and croutons are familiar garnishes for soups; newer, and just as attractive are these: a few grains of popped corn; minced chives; toasted and lightly buttered puffed cereals; a spoonful of unsweetened whipped cream, salted and sprinkled with minced parsley, chives, or finely chopped salted peanuts; very fine strips of thin, well browned pancakes; thin slices of frankfurters.

Quick cooking tapioca is a new thickener for soups; it's quick and easy to use, and it adds unusual texture and taste as well.

Corn Soup. (Serves 4)

- 1½ cups canned corn
- 1 cup meat broth, or 1 cup water and 2 bouillon cubes
- 2½ cups rich milk
- 1½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon onion, minced
- 1½ tablespoons butter

Cook corn in broth 10 minutes; force through sieve. Combine with milk, quick-cooking tapioca, salt, sugar, and onion in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter. Garnish with popcorn if desired.

Vegetable Soup

- 1 lb. soup meat, cut in small pieces
- ¾ lb. veal bones
- 2 quarts cold water
- ¼ cup sliced onion
- 3 cloves garlic
- ¼ cup sliced carrots
- ½ cup potato cubes
- ½ cup shredded cabbage
- 1 stalk celery (cut in pieces)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 sprig parsley
- 2 tablespoons celery leaves (chopped)

Place meat, water and vegetables in saucepan. Cover and simmer slowly for two or three hours. Remove from flame and put through sieve.

Cream of Tomato Soup.

- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- 2 slices onion
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk

Heat tomatoes with onion, soda, sugar, salt and pepper. Rub through sieve; reheat. Place butter in top of double boiler and melt. Add flour and mix thoroughly. Add milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Pour tomato mixture slowly into white sauce. Mix thoroughly and serve at once.

Fish Chowder.

- 4 pounds white fish
- 2 cups cold water
- 1 cup salt pork (diced)
- 1 onion (sliced)
- 4 cups potatoes (cut in ¾ inch cubes)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 3 cups canned tomatoes
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup coarse cracker crumbs

Clean fish. Remove head, tail and bones, cover with cold water and cook slowly for approximately 20 minutes. Drain and reserve stock. Place salt pork in skillet, add sliced onion and saute until onions are brown. Add to fish stock. Add potatoes and cook until almost tender. Skin and cut flesh of fish in 2-inch pieces, add to mixture and cook until tender. Then add seasonings, tomatoes and butter and heat thoroughly. Add cracker crumbs and serve immediately.

Onion Soup au Gratin.

Wash, peel, and slice thinly 5 medium-sized onions. Brown in ¼ cup of butter in a heavy frying pan.

Cover and cook slowly until tender, but not brown—about 10 minutes—adding more butter if necessary.

Add 1 quart beef broth, brown soup stock, or bouillon, and heat through thoroughly. Place slices of crisp dry toast in petite marmite—or small earthenware pots. Cover generously with grated Parmesan cheese, grated Swiss or grated American cheese. Pour hot soup over all, place under broiler flame just a moment to melt and brown cheese, and serve immediately.

Parsley Dumplings.

- 2 cups bread flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup lard
- 2 tablespoons parsley (chopped)
- ¾ cup milk (approximately)

Sift together dry ingredients, cut in fat and add chopped parsley. Add milk and mix gently with a fork. Drop by spoonfuls into boiling stew. Cover and continue to steam for 15 minutes without lifting the cover.

Peanut Butter Soup.

- 1 quart sweet milk
 - 3 tablespoons peanut butter
 - 4 thin slices onion
 - Salt and pepper to taste
- Add small quantity milk to the peanut butter and mix thoroughly. Heat remainder of milk, and stir in the peanut butter mixture. Add onion—and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with toasted croutons.

Practical Food Containers

Don't discard your empty flour and salt bags. Wash them in hot soapy water and they will make excellent refrigerator containers for lettuce, parsley, and other raw vegetables that are best kept chilled.

For Cleaner Cups

To remove coffee, tea or chocolate stains from cups rub well with a non-gritty cleansing powder applied with a soft cloth. Rinse in plenty of warm and cold water to remove all traces of the powder.

Personal Service

By THAYER WALDO
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service)

REYNOLD RAND gave himself over to the luxury of a near-leer. In fact, refusing it status as a full-fledged one is based upon purely technical grounds: he neglected to exhibit his contortional tour de force. Rather, he screened it with great care behind his open newspaper. Of course, that may have been all for the best; there was a lady seated opposite him at the breakfast table, and she chanced to be his wife.

"But my dear girl," he said, nothing but silk in the purr; "my dear, dear girl—how preposterous! Could you conceive of idiotic jealous suspicions in me, of all people? I engaged a bodyguard for you merely to ensure your complete protection and my peace of mind."

With an emphatic movement Irene Rand reached across and snatched the printed barricade from his hands.

"You," she stated in flat accusation, "are a triple distilled liar! In the last 10 years you've never given me a single thought when I wasn't right in the same room, and as few as possible then. You've gone and hired some horrible plug-ugly just to embarrass me so I won't go anywhere, all because in your vile imagination—"

"Pet," Reynold interrupted, suavely mild, "remember your blood pressure. Do you want the veins in your neck standing out when they take those close-ups today?"

Swift solicitous fingers fluttered to her throat, stroked it smoothly. Reynold lit a fat cigar and continued:

"My motives, I can only repeat, are of the highest order. As a well-known star, you can't afford to ignore the current prevalence of kidnapping and robbery."

In the kitchen on their right sounded a buzz. The titular head of the house glanced around in an almost apprehensive fashion. Then he faced forward again, managing a careless smile.

"Ah, yes," he murmured; "that must be the chap now. I asked him to drop around this morning so you could meet him."

Irene gasped and began loudly: "Reynold P. Rand, if you think I'm actually going to put up with this, you're daffy as hell and—"

Defly he had risen and slipped through the swing door, leaving her amidst speech. She sprang around the table, bolted after him—and then came to a halt just inside the dining room. Reynold's meager-back was toward her, in the hallway; towering neck and more above him stood a great warrior-featured blond lad with gleaming teeth.

"Oh, Mr. Drake—Reynold's just been telling me all about you. Do come in and sit down."

Both men faced her, one surprised, the other wearing a mask of cold politeness.

"How do you do, Mrs. Rand?" The tone was self-possessed and impersonal. "It's a pleasure to meet you; I've seen so many of your pictures."

His indifference brought an added thrill. Here indeed was novelty!

"Thank you," she said, leading him into the library. "Reynold, will you please call the studio and tell them I'll be a little late. Mr. Drake and I need to chat and get acquainted."

He came at nine that evening, looking monumental but even handsomer in dress clothes. Driving alone, they went to the Capitol club. For an hour she enjoyed herself utterly.

Drake still would unbend but slightly. She was trying for the dozentime to draw him into conversation when, several tables away, she suddenly glimpsed a familiar face, and started. Maurice! As she stared he saw her, evidently not for the first time. Elaborately he bowed; the accompanying smile was hard, ironic.

Quickly she glanced at her escort, and as instantly knew real excitement. He had seen, too! He was positively glaring in that direction. Irene leaned across the table to whisper:

"Never mind—he's probably tight. I never laid eyes on him before."

But it was futile; that seemed only to aggravate matters. With a bull-like growl deep in his young chest, Drake sprang up and was striding toward the offender, fists hugely doubled.

Shocked wonder checked her thoughts as she saw him charge straight past Maurice, heading for the table beyond. Then the tow-headed giant pulled a man out of a chair, sent him down again with a right to the chin—and the withered little shriek burst from Irene. Incredibly, the man Drake had punched was Reynold!

The next second or so she never recalled. She only knew that at last her bodyguard was standing before her again; that one enormous hand inexorably grasped the wrist of a tearful little thing with auburn hair.

"Sorry, Mrs. Rand," he said in a voice like avenging thunder, "but I'll have to leave you now, and I won't be coming back. It seems this stuff should begin at home, so from now on I'll be shadowing my wife."

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

With nautical trimmings.

THINGS that have to do with the sea are a good theme for decorating a recreation room, a boy's room or a summer cottage. A ship model has a salty flavor but is not a necessity. One youngster made a map of a desert island complete with a legend of hidden treasure. No one knew more than he about the island or treasure for he invented both of them. He also salvaged the steering wheel from an old boat and hung it on the wall with ropes. A small figure of a sailor was wired for a lamp.

His mother made a smartly tailored navy blue couch cover trimmed in a red anchor and a red cushion was adorned with a blue anchor. Straight strips of material 1-inch wide after the edges are turned under will make an anchor 12-inches long and 8 inches across as shown here. Bias tape may be used for the smaller anchor which is just half the size of the large one.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book No. 2 contains a complete alphabet to be made of straight or bias strips; also illustrations of five processes of fabric mending; 36 embroidery stitches; making doll clothes; and numerous gift items. Ask for Book No. 2, enclosing 10 cents to cover cost. Address: Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, N. Y.

To keep muslin curtains even when laundering them, put two curtains together and iron as one curtain.

Keep a large shaker containing six parts salt to one part pepper on the shelf of your kitchen range to use in seasoning foods.

Do not wrap silver in bleached linen. The sulphur which has been used in bleaching will tarnish it. Unbleached cotton flannel is best.

The gray or green color hard water gives to rice when it is boiled may be prevented by adding a pinch of cream of tartar or a little lemon juice to the water.

If rubber gloves are sprinkled on the inside with cornstarch or powder they will slip on more easily.

To remove a fresh grease spot on a rug, cover the spot with blotting paper, then press with a hot flatiron. Cover the spot with magnesia, let it remain for 24 hours, then brush off.

To restore fireplace bricks to their natural color and keep them clean, wash them in a mixture of two ounces soda, one ounce pumice stone, 1 ounce salt mixed with water till it forms a cream.

Lighteth His Soul

I met in the street today, a very poor young man who was in love. His hat was old, his coat was threadbare—there were holes at his elbows; the water passed through his shoes and the stars through his soul.—From "Les Misérables," by Victor Hugo.

To remove salt from fish in a hurry, wash the fish for a while in sweet milk.

Use the rinsing water from milk bottles to water house plants. This water will make them healthy.

Recall Important Events in Lincoln's Life 75 Years Ago

Abraham Lincoln's birthday this year recalls the fact that 1940 marks the 75th anniversary of the most momentous year in Lincoln's life, according to Dr. L. A. Warren, director of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company's Lincoln Museum in Fort Wayne, Ind. In support of this statement, Dr. Warren has listed the most important dates of 75 years ago:

It was on April 14, 1865, that Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth while watching the play, "Our American Cousin," at Ford's theatre. He died at 7:22 o'clock the following morning.

On February 3 Lincoln met with Confederate envoys in an attempt to negotiate between the states.

March 4 is the date of Lincoln's now famous second inaugural address.

On March 22 he visited Grant's army at City Point, Va.

Lincoln was first notified of General Lee's surrender on April 9.

The last public address of Abraham Lincoln was delivered at the Capitol, April 11, in celebration of Lee's surrender.

Lincoln's last appearance at a meeting of his cabinet was on April 14, the day of his assassination.

TO HOLD POULTRY SCHOOLS

For the first time in Cook county, a series of five evening poultry schools will be held beginning February 7 at the Blue Island Farm Bureau office under the direction of Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes and H.

H. Alp, extension poultry specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

One of the first two counties in the state to adopt evening schools for the teaching of improved poultry practices, each session will begin about 7:30 and continue until 9:00 p. m.

Dates of the schools, which are open to the general public, are February 7, 14, 20, 27 and March 5. Alp will discuss poultry problems pertinent to producers in Cook county and surrounding areas at each event.

In the February 7 meeting, Alp is to discuss the numerous factors that go to make up a successful poultry management program on the farm.

February 14 he will talk on brooding and rearing the chicks; February 20, poultry feeding; February 27, poultry house construction; and on March 5, disease control.

The importance of Cook county and surrounding areas as a poultry producing country and the interest among producers of this area is adopting better poultry practices is expected by Alp and Hughes to draw large numbers of growers to the sessions.
